NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL

1. Princess Elisabeth Island: Belgium's World's First Artificial Energy Island

Belgium. Belgium is building the world's first artificial energy island, called Princess Elisabeth Island, in the North Sea, approximately 45 kilometres off its coast. The project is being developed by Belgian electricity transmission operator Elia Transmission Belgium.

What Is Princess Elisabeth Island?

Princess Elisabeth Island is a man-made offshore energy hub designed to connect electricity generated by offshore wind farms to Belgium's electricity grid.

Unlike a natural island, it is being constructed using large concrete structures placed on the seabed. It will accommodate electrical substations and other equipment needed to transmit renewable electricity.

The project is important because it aims to support Belgium's offshore wind energy development and strengthen electricity connections between European countries.

Main Objectives of the Project

The island is designed to serve as a central connection point for offshore electricity infrastructure.

- Connect offshore wind farms: It will collect electricity generated by wind farms in the Belgian North Sea.
- Transmit electricity to the mainland: Substations and high-voltage cables will help transfer electricity to Belgium's onshore grid.
- Support international electricity connections: The island is intended to facilitate future electricity interconnectors with countries such as the United Kingdom and Denmark.
- Promote clean energy: The project will help integrate renewable electricity into the European energy network.

Historical Background and Important Milestones

The project developed as Belgium planned to expand offshore wind power and improve the way renewable electricity is transmitted.

- 3 October 2022: Elia presented its plans for the artificial island and announced its name, Princess Elisabeth Island.
- 28 February 2023: A consortium involving DEME and Jan De Nul secured the construction contract.
- 2024: Construction of the island's foundations began, according to project reporting.
- 2025: Work progressed on the island's concrete foundations and high-voltage infrastructure.
- 7 September 2026: The European Investment Bank announced a €1 billion green credit facility for the project's second phase.
- Expected operational period: The project is intended to become operational in the early 2030s; the precise schedule depends on construction and infrastructure development.

Why Is It Called an Energy Island?

An energy island is a central hub for collecting, converting and transmitting electricity generated offshore.

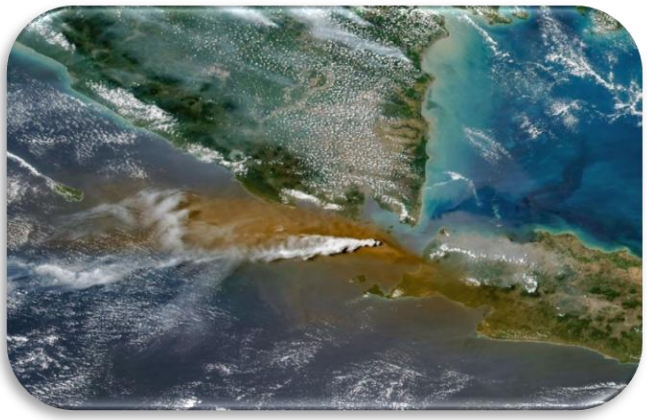

Princess Elisabeth Island is particularly significant because it is designed to integrate two types of high-voltage electricity transmission:

- HVAC: High-Voltage Alternating Current.
- HVDC: High-Voltage Direct Current.

Using both technologies will help connect offshore wind farms and support international electricity links. This makes the project different from an ordinary offshore wind-farm substation.

2.Anak Krakatau Volcano: Sunda Strait, Indonesia

The Sunda Strait, which lies between the Indonesian islands of Java and Sumatra. Anak Krakatau is an active volcanic island in Indonesia, located in the Sunda Strait, which connects the Java Sea with the Indian Ocean.

Background and Recent Eruption

Anak Krakatau means "Child of Krakatau" in Indonesian. The volcanic island emerged in 1927 within the caldera formed by the catastrophic eruption of the original Krakatau volcano in 1883.

In September 2026, Anak Krakatau experienced a continuous eruption lasting approximately 25 hours, from 4 to 6 September. The eruption produced volcanic ash and lava, and authorities monitored the volcano closely.

Historical Significance

The original Krakatau volcano erupted catastrophically in 1883, causing widespread destruction and a tsunami. Anak Krakatau subsequently emerged from the sea in 1927 and has continued to show volcanic activity.

The volcano lies in the Pacific Ring of Fire, a region characterised by frequent earthquakes and volcanic eruptions due to tectonic plate movements.

Sohar is one of Oman's important commercial and industrial centres.

4.International Literacy Day: 8 September

International Literacy Day is observed every year on 8 September to highlight the importance of literacy as a human right and as a foundation for dignity, lifelong learning and social development. The day was proclaimed by UNESCO in 1966 and was first celebrated internationally in 1967.

History and Background

Literacy is the ability to read and write, although modern understandings of literacy also include the skills needed to understand, interpret and use information in everyday life.

International Literacy Day was established to draw attention to the importance of literacy for individuals, communities and societies. Despite progress in education worldwide, many people still lack basic reading and writing skills or do not have access to quality learning opportunities.

UNESCO uses this day to encourage governments, educational institutions and communities to strengthen literacy programmes and expand access to education for children, young people and adults.

International Literacy Day 2026: Theme

The official theme for 2026 is "Literacy for People, the Planet and Prosperity." The year 2026 marks the 60th anniversary of the proclamation of International Literacy Day.

The theme highlights the importance of literacy in improving people's lives, supporting sustainable development and creating opportunities for prosperity.

6.Sugar Production in India: Maharashtra Takes the Lead in 2025–26

Maharashtra was India's largest sugar-producing state during the 2025–26 sugar season, producing approximately 99 lakh tonnes of sugar, according to the National Federation of Cooperative Sugar Factories (NFCSF). It overtook Uttar Pradesh, which had traditionally held the leading position in many recent seasons.

Important distinction: Uttar Pradesh remains India's largest producer of sugarcane in the 2025–26 agricultural estimates, while Maharashtra led in sugar production during the 2025–26 crushing season. Sugarcane production and processed sugar production are different measures.

Why Is Maharashtra a Leading Sugar-Producing State?

Maharashtra has a well-developed sugar industry, particularly in western Maharashtra. Sugar production depends not only on the quantity of sugarcane grown but also on its sugar content, recovery rate, crushing capacity and the length of the crushing season.

The major reasons for Maharashtra's strong position include:

- Favourable growing conditions: Sugarcane is widely cultivated in parts of western Maharashtra, where irrigation supports commercial farming.
- Cooperative sugar mills: Farmer-linked cooperative institutions have played an important role in developing the state's sugar industry.
- Sugar recovery: The percentage of sugar extracted from sugarcane affects the final quantity of sugar produced.

- Processing infrastructure: An established network of sugar mills supports large-scale crushing and processing.
- Agricultural investment: Irrigation facilities, improved farming practices and sugarcane varieties contribute to production.

What Is Swachh Vayu Survekshan?

Swachh Vayu Survekshan is an annual assessment conducted under the National Clean Air Programme (NCAP) by the Ministry of Environment, Forest and Climate Change. Launched in 2022–23, it evaluates the efforts made by cities to control air pollution and implement clean-air action plans.

The assessment considers measures such as road-dust control, management of solid waste, reduction of vehicle and industrial emissions, construction-waste management and public awareness. Therefore, the ranking evaluates pollution-control efforts and implementation—not simply which city has the cleanest air on a particular day.

2. How Did Lucknow Achieve First Rank?

Lucknow's performance was associated with several measures aimed at reducing urban air pollution:

- Road-dust control: Mechanised road sweeping and road paving to reduce dust.
- Electric mobility: Use of electric buses and electric vehicles for municipal services.
- Waste management: Scientific processing of waste and efforts to prevent open waste burning.
- Green spaces: Measures to expand and maintain urban greenery.

A geosynchronous orbit (GSO) is an orbit in which a satellite takes approximately 24 hours to complete one revolution around Earth, matching Earth's rotation period.

- It allows a satellite to observe the same broad region repeatedly.
- It is useful for applications requiring frequent observations, including weather monitoring, agriculture and disaster management.
- A geosynchronous orbit may be inclined or elliptical, so the satellite does not necessarily remain fixed over one exact point on Earth.

Important distinction: A geostationary orbit (GEO) is a special type of geosynchronous orbit that is circular and lies above the equator. EOS-05 was reported to operate in a slightly elliptical geosynchronous orbit rather than a perfectly circular geostationary orbit.

Importance of EOS-05

- It enables frequent imaging of large areas of India.
- It can support agriculture, forestry, weather-related observation and disaster management.
- Its repeated observations can help monitor rapidly changing situations, such as floods and cyclones.
- It adds a new capability to India's Earth-observation programme by using a geosynchronous orbit for imaging.

- Cyclone name: Arnab
- Contributing country: Bangladesh
- Meaning: Ocean or sea
- Region: North Indian Ocean
- Areas covered: Bay of Bengal and Arabian Sea

- The WMO/ESCAP Panel on Tropical Cyclones coordinates the regional naming system.

- The list contains names contributed by 13 member countries.

- Under the regional criteria, a system is assigned a name when its maximum sustained wind speed reaches 34 knots (approximately 62 km/h).
- Once a name has been officially used, it is not used again in this regional list.
